Chapter 2 by -

My great wings flapped into the wind. Blowing the trees like a tornado and breathing like thunder.

Above the heights of New York City I soared. Feeling for the first time in my life free. Free and powerful. As if my life were actually worth living now. I felt I had a purpose.

I just needed to find it...

Chapter 3 by Laura Frost

What did dragons do? I could kidnap a princess, but that seems kinda mean. I could hoard gold, but that seems kinda boring.

Now that I'm a dragon, I'm semi large, (smaller than a bus, larger than a car) have super sharp claws, can fly, and have semi-impervious skin! At least I think my scales are impervious to things. It would be a shame to have them be harmed, they're such a wonderful purple color.

All of these count as superpowers, so maybe I can be a superhero!

Now I can help people. Maybe I can stop what happened to my parents from happening to others.

I fly lower, coming to land on top of a building. Now I just have to find a crime. Shouldn't be to hard.

With my new, improved, dragon ears, I hear someone scream.

Chapter 4 by Korin Conner

I followed the scream till i came to a bank robbery, i flew in and grabbed the bank robber he let out a scream and let go of all the money. The police were shooting at me. Why would the do that? Stop i wanted to scream but all that came out was a roar. My scales protected me but. That didn't mean i couldn't feel pain. In one swift move i flew out pushing air on all of the police, they all fell to the ground. Serves you right i wanted to yell but all that came out was a roar. I flew and flew till cities were no more and all was left was pine trees and lakes and ponds. I landed out of breath and looked up a blue dragon stared at me.
